

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The methods and systems according to the current invention allow the use of slower and inexpensive image-processing components by approximating or compressing color image data prior to image processing such as enlarging, reducing and cutting an original image without sacrificing the output image quality or overall reproduction speed.